

Charity Week at Al-Ashraf Primary School

Hanfaa Anez

Al-Ashraf Primary has decided to participate in charity week (run by Islamic Relief) during the week starting 9th November. Charity week helps raise money for orphans and needy children.

In order to help this noble cause, the student council have been asking parents for donations. Members of the student council got to wear special Charity Week T-shirts. The member of the council who collects the highest amount of money gets treated to an amazing meal from Cardiff! So the student council have been working tirelessly to fill their buckets with heaps of money. Well, who wouldn't?

Kindly, the Al-Ashraf mums organised a spectacular bake sale. Kids brought lots of yummy cakes and dishes they'd made at home. Many items were sold, as well as sweets, savories and many more foods. A lot of money was raised by this sale.

Student council helped a lot, selling wherever they could. Be it in the jam-packed staff room or the crowded playground. My student council colleagues also helped with handling the sweet stall at lunch time. This was as easy as it could get, since the sweets looked really attractive and tasty! This charitable act could help save the lives of many suffering tragedy.

Supporting charity week has been a lively, exciting and different experience for all of the council and we hope that it has been nice for others in the school too.

We raised a fantastic £1,620.63
